Job Evaluation and Classification

Bow Valley College Classifications and individuals positions within a classification are determined by the use of a job evaluation structure. Establishment of classifications and alterations to job classifications are provided for under Article 15 of the Collective Agreement.

Job evaluation is the analysis and evaluation of work for the purpose of determining the relative contribution to the overall objectives of the organization of jobs within an organization.

Any change in an organization's design and structure may alter the content of a job, which may result in an adjustment in the evaluation of the job. Ideally the position description should be updated every time there is a substantial change to a position's purpose, scope, and/or responsibilities.

Job Evaluation methods provide a systematic approach and framework to sort positions in an equitable manner.

The Modified Hay approach used by Bow Valley College ranks jobs by level of accountability they carry in setting and achieving organizational goals and objectives. The Modified Hay Method is based on the idea that jobs can be assessed in terms of:

- the knowledge required to do the job;
- the thinking needed to solve the problems commonly faced;
- the responsibilities assigned.

These three factors are often referred to as "compensable factors".

The focus of the job evaluation process using the Modified Hay Method is on the nature and the requirements of the job itself, not on the skills, educational background, personal characteristics or the current salary of the person holding the job.

Working from documentation which describes the content of the job (the Job Description) and the environment in which it is performed, plus the definitions and qualitative measures provided (by the Modified Hay plan), each job is given a ranking on the three factors in relation to other jobs in the organization.

Key job functions and major responsibilities of the job are compared to the definitions of degree levels in order to determine the most appropriate level. The corresponding points for that level are then assigned to the job and are combined for all factors to derive a total score.

Job evaluation may also provide valuable information for organizational analysis and for human resource planning and management strategies such as succession planning, performance management, compensation, etc.

The Modified Hay method works because it is a dynamic process that organizations adapt and apply in ways that meet their needs. It is based on the notion that jobs can be measured on the basis of their relative contribution to the overall objectives of the organization. By considering core aspects of content and context that are common to all jobs, it provides a clear, understandable and systematic basis for defining and comparing the requirements for all kinds of jobs at all levels.

Modified Hay Guide Charts provide the standard tools used to systematically evaluate all BVC jobs.
